Please cut along the lines so each statement is separated.

Exaggeration	Stereotype	Gossip	Venting
When someone overstates the truth.	When someone says something that is commonly believed but is an oversimplified version of a particular type of person or thing.	When someone shares information without thinking of how it will affect the other person. Or the sharer does know and doesn't care.	When someone talks to someone else close to them about a problem with a friend.
When someone says something true but adds information.	When someone says something positive or negative about a group as a whole.	When someone shares something unintentionally that hurts someone's feelings.	When someone tries to figure out how to talk to a friend about something they are mad about.
When someone takes something small but true and makes it bigger.	When someone says something that makes a person feel boxed in or labeled.	When someone shares something intentionally to hurt someone else's feelings.	When someone's feelings have been really hurt and they don't know what to do so they talk to a friend.
